A Choice Changes Things

Requirement(s) 1

Gear up! A pencil or crayon and your adult partner.

Play a short game together. One person uses X and the other O. Take turns marking one empty square. Three of your marks in a row across, down, or diagonally wins. If every square fills without a winner, the game is a draw.

Pause and talk. Before choosing a square, point to two places you could play. After your turn, talk about what your choice changed. What might have happened in the other square?

Now imagine two Scouts want the same crayon. Talk about a choice you could make and what might happen next.

Draw your choice and what could happen because of it.

◯ I explained to my adult how a choice can have a consequence.

Winning is not the goal of this worksheet. Explaining what a choice changes is.
